LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

The Prime Minister's speech at Newcastle divides itself naturally into two parts. In one he replies to the Imperial Conference; in the other to his party critics. The latter are not likely to be satisfied with anything that he says, but I think most impartial persons will consider his answer to Mr. Asquith sufficiently complete. When he asks whether, if the previous Coalition had lasted till the end of the war, Mr. Asquith would at once have "scrapped" it and attempted to revert to purely party government, he supplies a thoroughly justification of his own present attitude.

His replies on the crucial questions addressed to him on the subject of indemnities, the punishment of the persons guilty of atrocities, and the removal from the ex-Kaiser downwards, and the continued presence of Germans in this country may not give full satisfaction, but are probably as complete as a responsible Government can make them at a respectful Peace Conference, when he will have to deal with these matters in association with the representatives of the Allies and of the United States. But I am strongly in sympathy with the demand that the authors of the war shall be made to pay in purse and in person for the misery that they have inflicted. On the whole I should say that the Premier's speech has improved the chances of the election.

The disintegration of the late German Empire proceeds apace, and it looks as this work of centralisation which began could not, unless his crimes have been committed on our territory. Perhaps, the sinking of the Lusitania might bring the Kaiser within the reach of the criminal law as an accessory or murder on the high seas before the fact; but these are difficult questions of interpretation, on which the lawyers only can express a decided opinion. It is, however, not unfair to expect that ingenuity in escaping from justice should be matched by equal ingenuity in bringing the criminal to justice. It may be that, even if the ordinary criminal law does not apply, the resources of civilisation are still not exhausted.

TON FOR TON.

In Germany, The Times says, "right is to pay "to the limits of our capacity," those limits should not be left to guesswork and vague formulæ. That, the organ of the City considers, is the opinion of the vast majority of the people. The "scrapped" instrument, representing the Kaiser, the Prime Minister, and the members of the War Cabinet. The distinguished visitors will drive in Royal Mews landaus, Hyde Park to their hotels; for the first carriage will be the Duke of Connaught and Marshal Foch, the first car Mr. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George will occupy the second carriage with the Belgian Cardinal Mercier, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Sumner, and a member of the War Cabinet. The visit is purely for business connected with the Peace Conference, and those who have been prejudged by ill-health will be attending.

THE CZECHO-SLOVAK REPUBLIC.

Dr T. G. Masaryk, First President of the new Czecho-Slovak Republic, who is returning to Prague from New York, arrived at Liverpool on board the Cunard liner Carmania yesterday. In the course of an interview, Dr. Masaryk said he thought one of the aims of the Peace Conference should be the reorganisation of Eastern Europe. It was a difficult task, but it could and must be done. If that task were neglected there was a danger that Germany would get the field again, and that must be avoided, at all costs. Britain and France had already helped the new Republics by their recognition, and he promised the help of the United States.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE KAISER.

Vox populi, says The Times, may not always be vox Dei, but it usually is on broad questions of moral right and wrong, and there is no doubt that popular judgment demands the punishment of the Kaiser as the principal author of the scourge that has afflicted mankind for the last four years. That the Kaiser deserves punishment, and that, if we had to single out one culprit for punishment, he would be the person with the best right to this evil eminence no one will doubt, nor is the argument put forward by some to be admitted, that he cannot be punished, because these are others who are also guilty. The one argument against doing what we can to bring this archcriminal to justice is that at present he is a mean, contemptible figure, hiding his head from the rum that he has brought on his country, and that, if we prosecute him, we may somehow impart dignity to him. Mr. Lloyd George tells us that "the greatest jurists in this country have come to the unanimous conclusion that the Kaiser is guilty of an indictable offence. So far, so good, but every one who has examined the law knows that to obtain justice in such a case will be no easy matter. There are very great difficulties in applying the extradition treaty with Holland to the case of the Kaiser. The crimes for which extradition is sought should, if the treaty is to apply, have been committed in the territory of the country that makes the application for extradition. Germany admittedly could ask Holland to extradite the Kaiser for his crimes, but we doubt not, unless his crimes have been committed on our territory. Perhaps, the sinking of the Lusitania might bring the Kaiser within the reach of the criminal law as an accessory or murder on the high seas before the fact; but these are difficult questions of interpretation, on which the lawyers only can express a decided opinion. It is, however, not unfair to expect that ingenuity in escaping from justice should be matched by equal ingenuity in bringing the criminal to justice. It may be that, even if the ordinary criminal law does not apply, the resources of civilisation are still not exhausted.

TWO VITAL QUESTIONS.

Mr. Lloyd George, writes the Parliamentary correspondent of The Times, showed a sound instinct for political strategy when he announced in his speech yesterday that he safely based his public demand on two fundamental war questions—the punishment of individual wrongdoers, from the Kaiser downwards, and the exaction of payment for the damage done by the military organisation of Germany. Nobody moving about with his ears open can travel for long without hearing a good deal of plain talk under these two heads. A good many politicians seem to have entered on the campaign with the idea that, with the signing of the armistice, the main of the problem would be only too thankful to put war questions on one side, and to settle down to the consideration of the future conditions of life on a new peace policy. The course of events has shown that this was a grave miscalculation. It was another illustration of the failure of the old Parliament to gauge the temper of the people. Mr. Lloyd George, as Minister to the various political machines that, although they may succeed in nominating their candidates, it is the constituencies which, in the end, will decide the issues. There is no question in this war, or in trade, the average expect, in the achievement of a peace settlement commensurate with the greatness of our cause and the immensity of our sacrifices.

WHO KILLED P.R.?

Who killed Proportional Representation? Mr. H. G. Wells asks in The Times to-day, and urges that the only sane, logical and practicable method of election is the method of election known as P.R. This method, and this method alone, allows of the candidature of men of similar opinions side by side, without any risk of splitting the party vote, letting in the opposition man, or Sir David Beatty, as a Coalitionist-Liberal standing against a Coalitionist-Tory in a mainly Coalitionist constituency, without the slightest danger of that constituency falling to a Labour man. It has been anathema, therefore, to the local knavedoms who rig out constituencies, and sell us to some Tory gold-bug or Liberal carpet-bagger, according to our particular style of corruption. Under P.R. you are sure, as between the Allies, which might be later as between the Allies, which might be individual that our claims should be pressed on generally in the Conference. For example, we certainly have an indisputable right to indemnity or reparation for the losses that we have suffered from the admittedly illegal submarine campaign. The justification as an act of retaliation. That was in a very real sense, the "costs of the action," and they have fallen with especial severity upon us, because our sea power, in the broadest sense, was the keystone of the whole arch; and, as the result of the loss of sea-power depends not only, or even as much, on fighting ships as on the Merchant Marine. Reparation, therefore, must mean primarily for us a policy of "ton for ton" for shipping sunk in the submarine war. If we are wise, we shall concentrate, first and foremost, on the "ton for ton" policy, for with England sea-power is not only first, but first without competitor.

THE VISIT OF M. CLEMENCEAU AND MARSHAL FOCH.

A Press Association's message, issued last night, says:—A Congressional Marshal Foch, after Orlando, and Baron Sonnino will arrive in London on Sunday afternoon, and will be received at the station by the Duke of Connaught, representing the King, the Prime Minister, and the members of the War Cabinet. The distinguished visitors will drive in Royal Mews landaus, Hyde Park to their hotels; for the first carriage will be the Duke of Connaught and Marshal Foch, the first car Mr. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George will occupy the second carriage with the Belgian Cardinal Mercier, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Sumner, and a member of the War Cabinet. The visit is purely for business connected with the Peace Conference, and those who have been prejudged by ill-health will be attending.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY CONTEST.

THE TRANSFERABLE VOTE.

THE DUBLIN UNIVERSITY ELECTION.

ARCHBISHOP TO PROPOSE SIR ROBERT WOODS.

As the nominations for the Dublin University election, the nomination of Sir Robert Woods, M.P., will be proposed by His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin, and will be seconded by Dr. William Alexander Gollogher, M.A., F.T.C.D.

The number of graduates of Dublin University who, by paying the fee, had their names registered yesterday as University electors was 41, bringing the total of new electors up to 276. The old register comprised 4,148 voters.

USE OF THE TRANSFERABLE VOTE.

In a letter, kindly sent in reply to our inquiry as to the use of the transferable vote in the Dublin University election, Mr. John H. Humphreys, Secretary of the Proportional Representation Society, 82 Victoria street, Westminster, writes as follows:—

I would emphasise the point that "plumping" cannot benefit a candidate. In the present contest no elector has two votes—he has only one. He cannot, therefore, vote for A. and B. He can vote for only one of them, but he can give a second preference.

The distinction is of importance and should be made clear. The agents may be inclined to advise that those who vote for A. should give their second preference to B., and that those who vote for B. should give their second preference to A. Well and good, but there is no object in stopping at that point. The preferences will be used either for A. or B. But they may well happen that only one of these gets elected, and it may be necessary to declare the other defeated. His votes would then be transferred, and they would have a deciding effect as to whether C. or D. was elected. It therefore is the interest of the elector to express at least three preferences where there are four candidates standing.

It is of the utmost importance that the electors for the University elections should understand the new method of voting, because if they put a cross instead of a figure on the papers 1, 2, 3, etc., their votes will be invalid.

I might also state that the payment of the registration puts the elector in possession of his vote, there being no renewal fee.—Yours, etc.,

EDWARD P. CULLENWARD,
Registration Officer.

UNIONIST ACTIVITY IN DUBLIN

Visits to various Unionist Committee rooms in Dublin yesterday showed that work is proceeding briskly. It is being confined to the present registration, and the arrangements for supplying the electorate with election literature. With reference to public meetings, the Unionist candidate for St. Patrick's ward is holding halls, but next week it is hoped to organise a series of meetings in various constituencies.

COLLEGE GREEN.

Sir John Irwin has decided to withdraw his name as a candidate for the forthcoming elections. He name having been mentioned in two constituencies, he states that he does not feel he can afford the labour which such a contest would involve.

MR. GOOD'S CANDIDATURE.

A largely-attended meeting of Mr. John Good's supporters in the Antrim Division was held last night at the Central Committee Rooms, No. 64 Dawson street, Dublin, who presided, introduced Mr. Good, who, he stated, had come an active and earnest candidate. He was glad to see the Urban District Council, and in the district for many years past.

Mr John Good, who was received with applause, stated that he had come forward as a business man in the Unionist interest at this crisis, in support of Sir Edward Carson's policy of dealing with the great questions of the war, which had yet to be finally completed. He expressed the view that the Irish question was in course of settlement, and the foundation of which he had some experience of trade, that it was the duty of the nation to give its whole-hearted support, without distinction of party or creed, to those who had the task of dealing with the question of the development of industry, education, and other matters of importance. Mr. Good then referred to the need, in view of the number of voters to be dealt with, and the short time at their disposal, for the utmost energy on the part of candidates and their supporters in order to induce others to assist.

Mr. Howat proposed a vote of confidence in Mr. Good, whom he had known and worked with for so many years. Mr. Good was a man of wide experience in commercial matters, and one who should command the confidence of all classes in Pembroke.

The resolution having been seconded by Mr. Ruthven and supported by a number of speakers, was carried with applause.

SOUTH COUNTY DUBLIN.

A meeting in support of Sir Thomas Robinson's candidature was held last night at the Committee Rooms, Carysfort avenue, Blackrock. The proceedings were of a private character, but canvass has revealed that women voters are often not aware that they are on the register. Many have been anathema, therefore, to the local knavedoms who rig out constituencies, and sell us to some Tory gold-bug or Liberal carpet-bagger, according to our particular style of corruption. Under the new system, however, the power depends not only, or even as much, on fighting ships as on the Merchant Marine. Reparation, therefore, must mean primarily for us a policy of "ton for ton" for shipping sunk in the submarine war. If we are wise, we shall concentrate, first and foremost, on the "ton for ton" policy, for with England sea-power is not only first, but first without competitor.

TWO VITAL QUESTIONS.

Mr. Lloyd George, writes the Parliamentary correspondent of The Times, showed a sound instinct for political strategy when he announced in his speech yesterday that he safely based his public demand on two fundamental war questions—the punishment of individual wrongdoers, from the Kaiser downwards, and the exaction of payment for the damage done by the military organisation of Germany. Nobody moving about with his ears open can travel for long without hearing a good deal of plain talk under these two heads. A good many politicians seem to have entered on the campaign with the idea that, with the signing of the armistice, the main of the problem would be only too thankful to put war questions on one side, and to settle down to the consideration of the future conditions of life on a new peace policy. The course of events has shown that this was a grave miscalculation. It was another illustration of the failure of the old Parliament to gauge the temper of the people. Mr. Lloyd George, as Minister to the various political machines that, although they may succeed in nominating their candidates, it is the constituencies which, in the end, will decide the issues. There is no question in this war, or in trade, the average expect, in the achievement of a peace settlement commensurate with the greatness of our cause and the immensity of our sacrifices.

WHO KILLED P.R.?

Who killed Proportional Representation? Mr. H. G. Wells asks in The Times to-day, and urges that the only sane, logical and practicable method of election is the method of election known as P.R. This method, and this method alone, allows of the candidature of men of similar opinions side by side, without any risk of splitting the party vote, letting in the opposition man, or Sir David permit a Coalitionist-Liberal standing against a Coalitionist-Tory in a mainly Coalitionist constituency, without the slightest danger of that constituency falling to a Labour man. It has been anathema, therefore, to the local knavedoms who rig out constituencies, and sell us to some Tory gold-bug or Liberal carpet-bagger, according to our particular style of corruption. Under the new system, however, the power depends not only, or even as much, on fighting ships as on the Merchant Marine. Reparation, therefore, must mean primarily for us a policy of "ton for ton" for shipping sunk in the submarine war. If we are wise, we shall concentrate, first and foremost, on the "ton for ton" policy, for with England sea-power is not only first, but first without competitor.

THE ULSTER SEATS.

A Sinn Fein Convention is to be held at Dungannon to-day to discuss the proposals of the Roman Catholic Bishops regarding three-cornered contests in Ulster. Should the Convention agree to negotiate with the Nationalist Party it is understood the Lord Mayor of Dublin will arrange for a conference between Mr. Dillon and Mr. MacNeill at the Mansion House on Monday.

BISHOP FOGARTY AND SINN FEIN.

In enclosing a subscription of £25 to the Sinn Fein Election Fund, Dr. Fogarty, R.C., Bishop of Killaloe, says: The country is sick of the House of Commons, and the policy of "massing" English Ministers has had ample trial. "I am not," he says, "afraid of abstention. It is not only a logical and long-called-for protest against the pillage of our national rights in the infamous Union, but, in view of the insulting policy expounded by the Prime Minister as to the share reserved for Ireland in his world-wide reconstruction, no other course is open to us if we have a particle of self-respect. Irish representation in a House of Commons dominated by Mr. Lloyd George and his anti-Irish Coalition is a horrible impasture which it is time to terminate. That United Coalition will work as shamelessly will on Ireland whether Irish members are present there or not. Why, then, send them there to be spat upon as paupers, to come back to us with empty hands, or with a few crumbs from the English kitchen garnished with rhetoric, but as a mockery of the rights of Anglicisation visibly developed on their person for the ruin of our national spirit? Partition to be defeated and liberty triumphant, we have only to talking to the dead ears of the House of Commons but, under God, where, and as to emancipation was won, land purchase, and conscription defeated—at home in Ireland by the determined will of the people.

"UNIONISTS AND CORK CITY."

In our issue of yesterday we published a letter from Mr. Thomas Farrington, Chairman of the Cork Centre of the Irish Unionist Alliance (Junior Branch), contradicting a statement in our issue of the 27th inst. to the effect that the local Unionist Party had decided not to nominate an official candidate. Mr. Farrington now complains that a further statement in the same paragraph, referring to the issue of advertisements, signed by six Lord Lieutenants, with the object of raising an election fund, "suggested an unwarrantable aspersion on these gentlemen. We could hardly say that such aspersion was intended, nor does the paragraph bear any such interpretation.

SIR THOMAS ESMONDE AND AN IRISH REPUBLIC.

A Sinn Fein meeting in Blackwater, Co. Wexford, was marked by continuous interruptions from a number of Redmondites, and it was with difficulty that the speakers succeeded in making themselves heard. Replying to an interruption, Mr. Walsh, one of the speakers, asked where were the Wexford pig dealers when the Nationalist Party were appealing for recruits. Some of those who were now shouting had got rich during the war. (Cheers.) Sir Thomas Esmonde had said that he was in favour of an Irish Republic, but he (Mr. Walsh) was not. He was a Sinn Feiner, and he was for Ireland a nation. (Cheers.)

SINN FEINERS DEPRIVED OF MUSICAL HONOURS.

A largely-attended meeting was held in Ballaghaderreen on Tuesday night, presided over by Mr. Hubert Lothy, U.C., for the purpose of considering the claims of Mr. M'Cann (Sinn Fein) in East Tipperary constituency. The Volunteers, Fife and Drum Band marched in front of the place of meeting. The Dr. Croke Memorial Cross, heading a large procession. It was announced that the band, and not Sinn Feiners, had been engaged to play at the proceedings owing to the mouthpieces of the instruments having been stolen out of the Sinn Feiners' band room.

Several speakers addressed the meeting.

A CLERICAL BAN IN ROSCOMMON.

A Convention in support of Mr. P. Hayden, Sinn Feiner, candidate for Roscommon South, took place in Athlone last evening. Archdeacon Krake signified his intention of supporting Mr. Hayden, while the Rev. Father Cummins, one of the priests in charge, announced publicly from the altar that he was identifying himself with the election. This, it is understood, has created considerable resentment among the members of the Roman Catholic Bishop, Rev. Dr. Hoare.

NATIONALISTS' RETIREMENT IN LEITRIM.

No candidate other than Mr. J. N. Dolan, the Sinn Fein nominee, is spoken of for the Parliamentary representation of Leitrim. Mr. T. D. Sullivan, J.P., and Mr. Joseph Devlin, M.P., the party candidate, has retired, as have also Messrs. Meehan and Smith, ex-M.P.'s.

FATHER O'FLANAGAN'S APOLOGY.

Speaking at a Sinn Fein meeting in Roscommon last night, which passed off without any unpleasant incident, Rev. M. O'Flanagan said that he had been accused of "stabbing another Irishman in the back, but he would be the last to result to the dead, but he would be the last to result to the dead, but he would be the last in the world to unnecessarily insult any man. Least of all men whom the people had recognised as their leader. If he did in the heat of an election campaign say anything that might be construed as a slight on the speakers, he wished most humbly to withdraw and apologise for it. John Redmond and the family of John Redmond were dear to him. Dillon was neither a good Englishman nor good Irishman, and it was his intention to serve two masters he felt.

MR. JOSEPH DEVLIN'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Joseph Devlin, the Nationalist Party candidate for the Falls Division of Belfast, whose his is being opposed by Mr. de Valera, issued his election address to-day. It is of quite unusual length. He states that everything that has happened since his first election has strengthened his conviction that there can be neither peace, progress, nor contentment in Ireland until the control of all purely Irish affairs is placed in the hands of an Irish Parliament with a responsible Executive, and the best means of effecting that object is a pledge-bound, united, and independent Irish Parliamentary Party, supported by an organised, disciplined, and united Irish people. The country was asked to support a new policy which, if it succeeded, would end only in disaster.

After enumerating the reforms carried out since his return to Parliament, Mr. Devlin referred to the Ulster Unionist Party in Ulster have outlined a programme of concession of the interests of a large and influential section of business opinion in the city, and of anti-Irish legislation which ought to be defeated at all costs. There is only one way of defeating it, and that is by the return of a strong and united Irish Party to Parliament. Nothing could better please Mr. Lloyd George and his reactionary supporters than that the Irish Party should be swept out of existence, as they would then be free from the danger and summary suppression for him and his Irish Executive of the slightest manifestation of Irish revolt against an intolerable and oppressive system of coercion and repression of popular liberties by martial law.

NORTH ANTRIM.

At a meeting of the North Antrim Constitutional Association held in Ballymoney Major P. Kerr Smiley was unanimously chosen for the representation of North Antrim, for which he was the sitting member. Major Smiley is a son of the late Sir Hugh Smiley, Larne, and in the war served in France and Egypt.

SOUTH CORK.

Sir Skibbereen Correspondent telegraphs that Sir Bryan Mahon, K.C., is mentioned as a probable candidate for South Cork. It is believed that he would receive very considerable support from all parties.

THE PLEBISCITE IN NORTH FERMANAGH.

In view of the plebiscite to be held on Sunday of the Nationalist electors to be held on Sunday, Sinn Fein canvassers are very busy. It is expected that the Sinn Feiners will have a large majority, although both sections have agreed to abide loyally by the result, the Unionists have little to fear if it is a straight fight with Sinn Fein.

NATIONALIST CANDIDATE FOR NORTH GALWAY.

At the Nationalist Conference in Tuam on Wednesday Mr. J. Sloyan, Tuam, was selected candidate for North Galway. The seat was formerly represented by Mr. B. Hazleton.

OPINION OF ENGLISH JURISTS.

"GUILTY OF AN INDICTABLE OFFENCE."

THE PAYMENT OF INDEMNITIES.

Speaking yesterday at Newcastle-on-Tyne, when he was presented with the Freedom of the City, Mr. Lloyd George said—Our victory has been due to the dauntless valour of our men on the sea, in the air, and on land, and also to the skill and industry of our workingmen and women. We have good reason to boast of what has happened. It will be a lesson to anybody who in the future thinks that they can, as the Prussian War-Lords thought, overlook these little islands in the reckoning. In future treaties before making their plans, will see what side Great Britain is on. We are now approaching the Peace Conference. It must be a sternly just peace, a relentlessly just peace. (Cheers.) Justice must not be merely vindicated in the victory, but in the settlement as well. (Cheers.) What about those people whom we received without question for years to our shores, and who, after we had given them refuge with the sons and daughters of our own households, abused that hospitality to betray the land that received them, to plot against its security, to spy upon it, and to supply information and weapons that enabled the Prussian War Lords to inflict upon it the most frightful punishment, for damage and injury on the land which had entertained them? never again. (Cheers.) The interests of security and fair play demand it. It has to be made clear to nations which believe like that that they must face the infinity result and punishment of their conduct. (Cheers.) Then there is the question of indemnity. In every Court of Justice throughout the world it is an axiom that if the claimant fails to establish the justice of his case he has to bear the cost of the litigation. What is true of individuals is equally true of nations. (Cheers.) When Germany defeated France she made France pay. That is the principle which she herself has established. There is absolutely no doubt about the principle, and that is the principle we shall proceed upon. (Cheers.)

Germany must pay the costs of the war up to the limit of her capacity to do so. (Cheers.)

All the Allies are considering this question. We have set up a Committee under Mr. Hughes, one of the ablest financiers of the Empire, to consider, and to report to us the measure of the capacity of the German Empire. France is also considering it, because the damage inflicted upon her has been extraordinarily severe. Apart from the cost of the conduct of the war, there is the actual damage inflicted on her towns and cities. What had got ruined in Belgium and France is the limit. There are not many ways by which one country can pay a bill to another. There are only two—gold, and goods. I prefer the other as by the produce of your own country. You can carry on well goods or raw materials. Gold is a matter of difficulties. There is no doubt as to the justice of the demand that she ought to pay. She must pay as far as she is able to pay. We must not allow her to pay in such a way as to stock our industries.

THE PUNISHMENT OF CRIME.

One more question is no more to be responsible for this horrible war. (Cheers.) If a man takes away a life he is answerable for it, and demands life for life. It will be a question for investigation, but somebody has certainly been responsible for having let loose upon the world millions of the best young men in Europe. In future treaties before making their plans, will see what side Great Britain is on. We are now approaching the Peace Conference. It must be a sternly just peace, a relentlessly just peace. (Cheers.) Justice must not be merely vindicated in the victory, but in the settlement as well. (Cheers.) WOUNDED, MISSING, AND PRISONERS.

BRITISH GUIANA AND S.S. JOHN, Sunday, 8th inst., at Donegal Square, Belfast, by the Rev. Dawson Steel, Dublin.

Captain Hilt Wilson White, R.A.M.C., the Dean of Christ Church has been officiating in Sevenoaks, Kent, for the last few months, and it must be presumed he has been killed on 12th April last. Captain White was the son of the late Dr. White, who was for many years Master of the Bellringers' Association, and was much interested in the Fishamble Street Music. He was a member of the staff of the Epsom Archers, and published a valuable paper giving the results of his investigations among the records of the Society, a number of insane people. In August, 1914, he joined the Army, and served in France as R.A.M.C. Surgical Specialist, and in Belgium. He was wounded at Ypres in December, 1915, but returned to duty after a few months' leave, and was then sent to Salonika. For some months before his death he was in charge of a reinforcement camp, whence he was, on the 12th of April last, sent up to the front, the time when the Germans were advancing in great strength. His Colonel wrote of him:—"He was almost adored by the men, and in all the days we were in the fighting, never sparing himself. Prime of all, he was with them in the fighting line when it was hottest, and set a very gallant gentleman. His younger brother, Gerald J. D. White, second Lieutenant, Royal Irish Regiment, was killed at the Somme, 5th July, 1916.

SUBMARINE VICTIMS' FUND.

A meeting of the Committee of the Submarine Victims' Fund took place yesterday evening at the Mansion House. The chair was taken by the Very Rev. Canon Brady, P.P., and amongst those present were—Dr. Denham Osborne, William Field, M.P., P. H. Shiel, C. J. Mahony, and J. J. Nagle, Hon. Sec. Several letters were dealt with, amongst them being some applications for help from the fund, which the Committee considered and made orders upon. Cheques were drawn for the usual weekly grants to the families adopted by the Committee. Dr. Denham Osborne personally thanked the Committee for their kind sympathy with him during the illness of his son. The question of appreciating some of the boys of the families who lost their breadwinners was under consideration, and the matter was postponed to the next meeting.

BALL AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

The ball at the Mansion House last night, in aid of the Lady Mayoress's Fund, to supply coal to the Dublin poor, was most successful. The attendance numbered 580 ladies and gentlemen, and the arrangements for the evening were carried out without a hitch. The music was supplied by the Clarke-Barry band, and dancing was kept up until the small hours of the morning.

ROYAL VISIT TO PARIS.

THE KING'S TRIBUTE TO THE CITY.

PRESIDENT POINCARE AND BRITAIN'S EFFORT.

"WE ARE UNITED FOR EVER."

Reuter's Paris Correspondent, in a message dated Thursday night, says:—When Royal procession, consisting of state carriages, entered the courtyard of the Elysee this afternoon, the 23rd Territorial Regiment presented arms, drums rolled and trumpets sounded, and the band played "God save the King." As the King and the Princes passed the troops presented arms and saluted.

M. William Martin, Director of the Protocol, was awaiting the Royal party at the foot of the stairs, which were decorated for the occasion with emblematic military trophies, and the Allied flags. At the entrance to the salon, General Dubois, Chief of the Military Cabinet, and Major Nazareth, greeted the King and the Princes, and conducted them to President Poincare. President Poincare advanced towards his illustrious guests, who shook hands with him very cordially. The President was accompanied by M. Oliver Sainsere, Secretary-General of his Civil Cabinet, and the officers of his Ministry Cabinet.

The King, the two Princes, and President Poincare then entered the Grand Salon, followed by the Royal Princes, by the Parisian population. He again expressed to President Poincare his admiration for the French nation, which had so valiantly endured the greatest trials of war.

At the present not to-night, President Poincare replied in reply to the King's speech, and after referring to the vain efforts made by the Entente Powers to preserve the peace of Europe, said:—Germany, however, was determined to push her horrible design to extremes, and nothing succeeded in stopping her from her purpose. England realised at once that hostilities would be long, and would demand of the British Empire the gradual formation of a powerful army and the provision of enormous quantities of material. The enormousness of the task did not daunt her. She called to the work all her Dominions and all her Colonies, and from one end of the world to the other a cry of love for the Motherland was heard. Never was a spectacle than that of the peoples scattered over the face of the earth rising en masse to fly to the aid of the Mother Country. When the whole history has the spirit of liberty which has always inspired the administration of the British Empire, received its consecration. Besides the troops of all these contingents, the armies of Great Britain have, during the whole of the war, gained in strength and experience, and have performed exceptional feats of arms and have paved the way for more and more striking successes for the near future. Finally, the British Empire has found in the enemy its safest ally. I thank Your Majesty for having given me the opportunity of visiting your country at the moment of your glorious triumph. My admiration has not ceased to grow with the years.

Britain has never been for the Allied squadrons, was maintaining the mastery of the seas, was safeguarding the approaches, and was assuring to the American troops their free passage across the ocean Sire, the heart of France has been deeply moved by the sympathy shown for her by the great sovereign of England to the common cause. The previous friendship has been changed into an alliance, and into a fraternity of arms, which is about to find in the forthcoming negotiations a new unity, and the beneficent effects of which will be felt throughout the whole of the world. Just as we have kept side by side in the fatigues and perils of war, so we shall find ourselves again side by side in the works and pleasures of peace. Together we have suffered, together we have fought, together we have conquered. Together we shall be united for ever. It is with this first hope that I raise my glass in honour of Your Majesty, of Her Majesty the Queen, of Her Majesty Queen Alexandra, of Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, and the entire Royal Family. I drink to the welfare and prosperity of the United Kingdom and of the British Empire.

FRIDAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Telegraphing on Friday, Reuter's Paris Correspondent says:—King George left the Ministry of Foreign Affairs at 10.30 this morning, and proceeded to the British Embassy. The King, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, drove in an open carriage, which was followed by the Royal Princes, and the mounted Prince Albert and a British Admiral. The members of the Royal suite followed in motors. The streets were lined by troops, and formed a guard of honour. The Royal party returned at 11.25 to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Lord Derby arrived at the British Embassy, the Scots Guards' band struck up the National Anthem.

Lord Derby presented to His Majesty the civil and military Staff of the Embassy, after which the British soldiers were presented. Paraded on the front of the Embassy, after which the King inspected the Scots Guards, the mounted Staff, and the Embassy, after which the King himself inspected the Scots Guards, the mounted Staff, and the Embassy, after which the King himself inspected the Scots Guards, the mounted Staff, and the Embassy.

After conferring with Lord Derby, the King left the Embassy at 12.15 amid enthusiastic cheers of the crowds.

LUNCHEON AT THE HOTEL DE VILLE.

The King and President Poincare and their suite left the Palais D'Orsay at twelve o'clock for the Hotel de Ville, where a detachment of the Republican Guard, and Cuirassiers, received them with the usual honours. The two Chiefs of State were received by the Municipal Council and conducted to the Hotel de Ville. The two Princes, and Generals Legrat and Duparge and other officers, King George was wearing the uniform of a British Admiral.

The crowd cheered the party, especially King George, who was greeted with cries of "Vive l'Angleterre." "Vive le Roi!" "Vive George!" "Vive l'Angleterre." "Vive la France!"

George left the Hotel de Ville at 2.45 and returned to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, being greeted with the same enthusiasm as on his arrival.

M. Millerand, President of the Municipal Council, in welcoming the King at the Hotel de Ville, recalled His Majesty's last official visit to Paris a year ago, and said:—We shall never forget the spontaneity with which Your Majesty declared yourself from the very first in favour of the cause of the Allies, and the encouragement it gave to Frenchmen and Belgians, treacherously attacked. During the whole course of the war Your Majesty's personal effort for the benefit of Your Majesty's personal effort for the benefit of Your Majesty's personal effort for the benefit of new library

In connection with

The Times Book Club Library.

In a trouble-saving age, striving to make easy the task of reading, to give everybody who can afford even a few pence weekly the books he or she wants, the founders of this great circulating library have built up a Book-lovers' service that is stripped absolutely of the formality and petty annoyance that so long spoiled the use of such Libraries.

The most indolent of readers, the least systematic searcher, is put on an equality with the experienced library habitue, at the trifling cost of a subscription to The Times Club.

Your reading will cost you less, and please you more. Let us show you how well we can serve you in this most important matter. A postcard will bring you full particulars.

Does Ireland want a Drunken Demobilisation?

Every Man and Woman with a Vote for Parliament who wants Peace with Honour must act now.

The War Parliament cut down your Coal and Gas that Brewers might not go short. It allowed Distillers to destroy 1,300,000 tons of grain and hoard its stock of spirits. Sixty days' supply of the people's Bread and six weeks' supply of the people's Sugar will have been turned into Drink and sold at an exorbitant profit this year. If the people do not act before a new Parliament is elected

Demobilisation will mean Drunkenness

You must elect Candidates who will protect our Soldiers and Sailors. It is not the Soldier or the Sailor who wants a Drunken Demobilisation; it is the Brewer and it is the Publican. They grow rich on the War. Do not let them grow rich in the demoralisation of the people. You can use Peace in better ways than drinking.

To Vote for Prohibition Candidates is to Vote for Peace with Honour

It is not enough that Candidates shall support temperance passively. They must be pledged to action.

Vote for No Candidate who is not pledged to be active for

Prohibition during Demobilisation

FINANCIAL NEWS

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

The Dublin Stock and Share Markets yesterday afternoon were not without interest, though many of the quotations registered were for exceptional lots. Bank of Ireland Stock was still higher, and Munster and Leinsters touched £8, or four times the amount paid up on the shares. Guinness were still harder, and reached 35. Burns' Steamship shares were still very scarce. Maroonis weakened on the re-hearing of the Isaac v. Hobhouse trial now proceeding. Rails scarcely moved, but Midland Great Western 4½ p.c. Debs. were weak. Textiles were firm, and Dolphin Hotel Ord. scored a big advance. Vickers were a firm market.

Bank price movements were interesting. Bank of Ireland rose 1 to 220, and Munster and Leinsters 7 to 8, while a few Royals were sold at 13/, or 1/ under last marking.

In Steam, Burns 5/ 8% Pref. were bid up still to 15s. 6d., against 14s., but did not offer near this level.

In Maroonis, the Ord. gave way 2s. to 93s. for a small lot. Americans marked 5s. 9d.

Home Rails were very little altered. Great Northern fell ½ to 92½, and the Pref. ¼ to 77½. Wicklow and Bandon Stocks were still bid for. Midland Great Western 4½ p.c. Debs. were on offer at 79, against 80, the previous level, but 75 unofficially was the best bid.

As regards Manufacturing Shares, Bleachers were about 6d. lower at 21s. 6d., but Dyers were bid for, and closed at a recovery of 3d. to 9d. ground about 42s. Coats at 77 were steady, but Cotton Ord. declined 3d. to 65s. 9d., while Vickers rose 5d. to 41s. 3d.

Trading, etc., show few changes of interest. Barker Delin. fell ½ to 9½, but H. Moore and Alexanders rose 6d. to 25s. 6d. Tedcastle Shares were on sale, and Freeman's Journal Pref. fell to 5s. 6d. Dolphin Hotel Ord. rose 14s. to 65s., and Hibernian Fire 3d. to 5s. 6d. (4s. paid).

MERCER'S HOSPITAL LINEN GUILD.

VALUABLE WORK OF CHARITY.

The fourth annual meeting of the members of the Linen Guild in connection with Mercer's Hospital, Dublin, was held yesterday afternoon under the presidency of Lady Powell, Lismullen, Navan.

Mrs. Henry Wells (Hon. Secretary) referred in her report to the retirement from active service of Miss Jacques, who had been working about four afternoons a week in France. The Guild had an arduous time during the year, and the members had been kept busy making garments for the wounded, and for the children, parcels, but they had not forgotten the hospital, and had sent in a large number of articles of linen, etc., which were much needed. The Guild had also undertaken another year owing to the generosity of Mrs. Hall Walker, to maintain the same standard that they had been trying to reach for some years, namely, to be able to provide the hospital with all the linen they required during the year. They had had a small balance in hand at the beginning of the year, but this had to be used to meet the deficit of last year, and they had also had to make a serious effort to increase their membership. They had a membership of 300 members, and were hoping to increase it to 500 members. The hospital had also a trying period to the members of the Staff, and the Guild had to bear the burden of the hospital, by keeping the staff supplied with linen, and also by providing many comforts for the patients.

Mr. W. J. Fraser, treasurer, submitted a statement which showed that the finances of the Guild were in a satisfactory condition. The balance in hand at the end of last year (by letter inadvertently omitted to be mentioned in last week's report) was £49 2s. 8d. The subscriptions had diminished somewhat, and amounted to £46 11s. 7d. These figures were considerably more than counterbalanced by the increased amount of donations, which totalled £100 7s. 6d. In addition to this sum £50 had been received from Mrs. Hall Walker for the maintenance of the linen fund, which was to be maintained.

Miss Bewley, speaking on behalf of the Matron, Miss Deane, spoke of the work of the hospital and to the residence which the Lower Grand was to the members of the staff, who were thus enabled to obtain some of the rest so necessary to them in the strain under the pressure of the hospital could be had under other conditions.
